The Insider Threat Awareness Virtual Roundtable
Presented
LIVE Tuesday, September 18, 2012 | 2:00 - 3:00 pm (EDT)

The insider threat to critical infrastructure is one or more individuals with the access and/or inside knowledge of a company, organization, or enterprise that would allow them to exploit the vulnerabilities of that entity's security, systems, services, products, or facilities with the intent to cause harm.

Our subject matters experts will discuss the three types of insider threats: physical/cyber sabotage, theft of intellectual property, and fraud.

To help you prepare for the possibility of an insider threat, the Insider Threat Awareness Virtual Roundtable will raise awareness of common characteristics and indicators of insider threats and help you to understand:

–   What malicious insiders are and how they impact organizations
–   What an organization can do to deter and detect insider threats
–   What defense and response strategies are available to mitigate the insider threat

This free, online, interactive roundtable will include video, commentary by security experts, a question-and-answer session, and additional resources.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND:

Security staff, private sector owners and operators, government agencies and organizations, and employees from all industries.

MODERATOR:

Jon Richeson, National Protection and Programs Directorate, Office of Infrastructure Protection, DHS

PANELISTS:

Dawn Cappelli, Technical Manager, Enterprise Threat and Vulnerability Management and the CERT Insider Threat Center, CERT Program, Software Engineering Institute, Carnegie Mellon University

David Borushko, Insider Threat Program Manager, Federal Bureau of Investigation

A limited number of phone lines will be available for participants so please plan to listen online using your computer's speakers or headphones.
