California’s Private Attorneys General Act (“PAGA”) allows workers to bring representative actions for Labor Code violations.

- This panel will explore the ever-changing PAGA landscape, and offer insight into how best to handle PAGA litigation.
- The speakers will provide both introductory and higher level discussion regarding what PAGA is, what violations give rise to PAGA liability, how PAGA claims are brought and litigated, and what remedies are available through PAGA.
- They will also explore issues that arise when PAGA claims are subjected to motions to compel arbitration, as well as aspects of settlement of PAGA claims.

About the Speakers:

Hunter Pyle graduated from Boalt Hall School of Law (U.C. Berkeley) in 1997. He has represented clients in wrongful termination/discrimination cases against such entities as Chevron, Georgia-Pacific, and the California Department of Transportation (Caltrans). Mr. Pyle has served as the Chair of the Alameda County Bar Association Labor and Employment Committee. In addition to practicing law full time, he is a Lecturer at Berkeley Law School where he teaches the Employment Law course to 2nd and 3rd year law students.

Catha Worthman is a founding partner at the firm Feinberg, Jackson, Worthman & Wasow in Berkeley, CA. Through her public interest practice involving class actions, multi-plaintiff cases, and individual litigation, Catha advocates for the rights of workers, retirees, and people with disabilities. She has litigated cases involving the full range of ERISA and employee benefits issues, including breach of fiduciary duty, ESOP, pension, healthcare and long-term disability benefits, as well as wage and hour and disability rights cases.
