

New Farm Land In the Works!

We've started several conversations with various ALL IN Eats folks about possibilities for getting new land (larger parcels) into production around the County! A variety of options are currently under consideration, and we'll update you as soon as we're able to finalize things.

Several of the potential partners would like to confirm the capacity of farmers within the County to be able to cultivate these larger parcels, especially using sustainable approaches like regenerative agriculture and aquaponics. We would like to show these potential land partners that we have a strong collective, so...

if you are interested in cultivating new farm land, now is the time to join our ALL IN Eats Farmer Collective!
