A compelling biographical movie produced by a young Culver City man who died of Lou Gehrig's Disease (ALS). Brian Murphy shares his inspirational story while fighting a terminal illness. His wife and young children bring much energy and wisdom to the film. The award-winning movie is very thoughtful, compelling, and inspiring.

This hour-long film will be immediately followed by a panel discussion with ALS medical professionals.

Open to the public, but may be of special interest to:

- Healthcare providers wishing to learn more about ALS.
- Students seeking education regarding chronic illness.
- Individuals living with ALS and their families.
- Filmmakers or film studies students.
- Community members seeking involvement in Disability Advisory Committee activities.
