Officer Bibeau made contact with the individual and conducted a fisheries inspection. At the conclusion of the fisheries inspection, Officer Bibeau found the individual to be in possession of an undersized trout and an undersized, out-of-season snook. He wrote the individual a misdemeanor citation for possession of an out-of-season snook and warnings for the other fisheries violations.

While on land patrol at the North Skyway fishing pier, Officer Bibeau observed an individual wade fishing from the shoreline. While watching from a concealed location, the officer observed the individual return to his vehicle with a large redfish and place the fish in the back seat. The individual was almost finished packing up his belongings when Officer Bibeau stopped him to conduct a fisheries inspection. At the conclusion of the inspection, Officer Bibeau located a 29-inch redfish and wrote the individual a misdemeanor citation for possession of an oversized redfish.

Officers Smith, Burks and Freemon were on water patrol in the Johns Pass area. They observed a commercial fishing vessel with stone crab fishing gear and several traps on board. The harvest of stone crab is closed, so the officers decided to investigate further. During the investigation, the officers observed multiple stone crab traps that belonged to multiple owners. The subject advised that he was harvesting marine life and collecting ghost traps that were in the area while he was diving because they were destroying marine life habitat. The traps had buoys and line attached to them which is not consistent with ghost traps being on the bottom. Additionally, the line on the traps appeared to be somewhat clean without significant marine growth which is consistent with being hauled by a trap puller. The officers contacted the respected owners of the traps and they wanted to press charges for theft. The traps were seized and will be returned to their owners. Charges will be filed with the Pinellas County State Attorney's Office.

Lieutenant Wells and Officers Smith and Burks were on water patrol around Hurricane Pass. They observed a subject with a lifejacket on being swept out to sea due to the strong outgoing tide. There was an outgoing tide with a west wind, therefore, the current and winds were creating approximately 3-foot waves in the Pass. As they approached the subject, the officers observed a PWC with no one on it doing circles (run away PWC) and another PWC with a person on it waving their hands. The officers eventually got the runaway PWC stopped and as they went to rescue the other two subjects, the FWC vessel's engines were striking bottom due to a sandbar and waves. Lieutenant Wells jumped in the water and assisted the person on the PWC waving his hands and Officers Smith and Burks went and rescued the other subject being swept out to sea. The people fell off their PWC's in the Pass and they did not have their lanyard properly secured, so one of the PWC's never shut off. Everyone was rescued with no injuries and no vessel damage.

Lieutenant Martin was responding to a call about a person that jumped off a boat and had not been found. Lieutenant Martin responded by land and Officer Baker responded by water to search for the missing person. The search was called off several hours later and turned over to the St. Petersburg Police Department as a missing person's case.

Officers Baker and Caldwell were dispatched to a vessel that struck a rock pile. As the officers arrived, they could see two people, one outside the vessel and one still inside the vessel. Lieutenant Andriano responded to a loggerhead sea turtle that was entangled in crab trap fishing gear off of Fort Myers Beach. While the turtle definitely needed assistance in getting untangled, it was too quick for Lieutenant Andriano to handle on his own. Officer Spoede met Lieutenant Andriano on the beach and they returned to the entangled turtle. Officer Spoede realized there was no way to free the turtle while on board the patrol boat, so he grabbed a mask and snorkel and jumped in the water. BROWARD COUNTY

Officer Vacin was on patrol in Von Mizell/Eula Johnson State Park. He was on the jetty in the park and made contact with a fisherman. After a marine fisheries inspection, the individual was found to be in possession of 2 undersized mutton snapper and 2 undersized yellowtail snapper. He issued the individual a criminal notice to appear. The dead fish were seized as evidence.

Officer Brock was dispatched to the area of the 14 Street Bridge in Pompano Beach to meet with a Broward County Sheriff's Office Marine Unit deputy. The deputy had stopped a vessel for violation of a manatee zone. With information gathered from the deputy and field alcohol tasks completed, Officer Brock placed one individual under arrest for BUI and delivered him to the Broward County Jail.

As major holidays result in increased activity in Florida's state parks, Investigator Teems was on land patrol at Mizell-Johnson state park's main entrance. She performed a traffic stop on a vehicle bearing a temporary Florida registration. A records check reported an expired registration. The driver of the vehicle presented a Florida driver's license. A records check on the Florida driver's license indicated it was suspended in April 2015 for failure to submit to an alcohol test. A records check also indicated the driver had an active warrant for failure to appear. The entering agency (Miami-Dade) stated "no extradition". The driver was issued a notice to appear citation for charges of driving with an expired tag, driving while license suspended or revoked, and no motor vehicle registration. The driver's vehicle was towed and impounded.

Investigator Teems responded by land to a call for assistance regarding a vessel explosion resulting in serious injury. Ft. Lauderdale Fire Rescue was on the scene when Investigator Teems arrived. Witness statements indicated that gas was pumped into the fresh water holding tank instead of the gas tank. The gas pumping incident occurred at the 15th Street Marina in Ft. Lauderdale. The subjects were advised not to operate the vessel. The vessel was then towed back to the owner's residence. The subjects attempted to use wet/dry shop vacuum to siphon the gas out of the fresh water holding tank. It is suspected sparks from the vacuum and gas fumes caused the explosion. One of the subjects was transported to Broward General Hospital for treatment. Ft. Lauderdale Fire Rescue will investigate the incident.

MARTIN COUNTY

While conducting fisheries inspections at the Hobe Sound Bridge, Officers Cobo and Morrow made contact with a subject who had just returned to his vehicle from a popular fishing spot underneath the bridge. When asked what he had caught, the subject stated that he had caught what he believed to be mutton snapper. Upon inspection of the fish, the officers found the subject to be in possession of undersized gray (mangrove) snapper. The subject was educated on fish identification and provided literature on recreational saltwater regulations and was issued a warning for the undersized fish. The undersized mangrove snapper were returned to the water at the conclusion of the call.

In June, FWC received an internet crimes complaint referencing a subject that was possibly stealing sea turtle eggs from the Jupiter Inlet Colony Beach. The anonymous tip advised that every night at approximately 10:00 p.m., a subject would set up camp on the beach and wait for sea turtles to come in and start laying their eggs, and the subject would take them. Later in June, a second compliant came in from the same location and with the same approach to poaching eggs. Officer Stone and Investigator Sierra set up surveillance on that night and for the following five days with no results. On the night of July 1, Officers Stone and Church and Investigator Sierra went back to the same location at approximately 10:00 p.m., and started surveillance again for the sixth night. At approximately 10:32 p.m., Officers Stone and Church observed the subject actively stealing sea turtle eggs from a loggerhead sea turtle as she was laying them. The subject was arrested and booked into the Palm Beach County Jail on a 3rd degree felony charge. All species of sea turtles are protected by the Endangered Species Act, as either a threatened or endangered species.

Officers Shermetaro and Fretwell were on water patrol in the Fort Pierce area when they made contact with a vessel operator at a local boat ramp. The operator appeared to be under the influence of alcohol. Officer Shermetaro requested the subject perform field sobriety tasks at the boat ramp, which the subject complied with but performed on poorly. He was subsequently arrested for BUI.

Officer Shermetaro was assisting Officer Fretwell with another case when he observed a vessel having a difficult time getting to the boat ramp and tying off his vessel to the dock. Officer Shermetaro made contact with the subject, along with officers from the USCG Station Fort Pierce. A boating safety inspection was conducted, at which time the operator appeared to be under the influence of alcohol and refused to conduct field sobriety tasks. During the investigation and contact made with the subject, enough probable cause was developed to arrest the subject for BUI.

Officers Fretwell and Shermetaro were on water patrol in the Fort Pierce area. While they were assisting another officer with a BUI investigation at a local boat ramp, they observed a vessel arrive at the boat ramp. The operator exited the vessel and began to walk to his vehicle until he saw the officers and then tried to get back in his boat. The operator was having difficulty walking and appeared to be under the influence of alcohol. Officer Fretwell made contact with the subject and conducted a boating safety inspection and asked the operator if he would perform field sobriety tasks. The operator refused to perform the tasks. At the conclusion of the field investigation, enough probable cause had been developed to arrest the subject for BUI. The information on the passenger was verified through dispatch and returned a confirmed active warrant. He was then arrested and transported to jail.

Over the holiday weekend, officers worked heavily traveled boating corridors looking for impaired boat operators. Overall, seven arrests were made for BUI. While on vessel patrol in federal waters offshore of Marco Island, Officer Lugg observed a vessel with two occupants on board actively fishing. When he approached the vessel and asked how the fishing was, both individuals on board said "terrible." After completing a thorough marine fisheries inspection, three undersized red grouper and one undersized mutton snapper were located along with drug paraphernalia and marijuana shake. All violations were cited accordingly.

Officers Araujo and Polly were patrolling the Picayune Strand State Forest during the holiday weekend when Officer Polly received a tip from the forestry staff that there was illegal target shooting taking place in area. Officer Araujo located a vehicle matching the description that the staff provided and noticed that it did not display the proper entrance fee tag. Officer Araujo conducted a traffic stop and made contact with three subjects inside the vehicle. Officer Polly found 9mm rounds littered on the ground at the shooting site and noticed a sign that had matching bullet holes in it. Officer Polly asked the driver if he had any firearms and to show them to him. One of the subjects handed Officer Polly a 9mm handgun that was empty. The driver later admitted to target shooting and was given a warning for discharging a firearm in a public place. He was also issued a littering citation. In addition, all three subjects were given citations for failure to pay the forestry day-use fee.

During the National Operation Dry Water weekend, Officers Johnson and White were on vessel patrol in Naples Bay. They observed a 43-foot Viking vessel enter a residential canal. The vessel was operating without an all-around white light. Officers activated their blue lights and pulled into the narrow canal behind the vessel. The operator never noticed the officers' blue lights, and once they arrived at the operator's residence, the officers made contact with the operator to address the navigational light violation. The officers detected signs of impairment from the operator, including the odor of alcohol, and the operator tried to hand over a credit card as a driver's license. The operator performed one field sobriety task, but refused all other tasks. During the test, Officer White observed sufficient clues to indicate impairment. The totality of the circumstances led Officer White to arrest the operator for BUI. The operator refused to provide a breath alcohol sample.

MONROE COUNTY

Lieutenant Robison and Officer Adams observed two individuals using pole spears at night near the Quay Boat Ramp in Marathon. Using night-vision equipment, the subjects were observed stabbing what appeared to be spiny lobster, removing them from their spears and storing them nearby. Upon approaching the individuals, one male informed the officers he was harvesting lobster, showing the officers his hidden cooler under some dead palm fronds. His cooler contained 11 whole lobster, all of which had been speared, 5 of which were undersized. He also had no measuring device. The second individual informed us he was not doing anything. He had seen or heard us approach, and had hidden his homemade pole spear and stash of lobster. The first individual helped officers locate the second subject's pole spear and a plastic bag which contained 11 lobster tails, one with a puncture hole, and six undersized lobsters. The second subject was also charged with interference with an FWC officer, no valid fishing license, no Lobster Endorsement, as well as a citation for littering. The first subject was given a notice to appear with the second subject being transported to the county jail.

Officers Munkelt and Garrison were on water patrol working resource protection on the ocean side of Ann's Beach when they observed three individuals walking in the shallow water. One of the individuals was carrying a plastic bag with unknown contents. Another individual had his shirt wrapped around his right hand and would occasionally shove his hand in what appeared to be holes in the sand. As they came closer, the officers asked them what they were doing and the individual with the bag stated that they were catching crabs. Officers Munkelt and Garrison identified themselves as law enforcement and asked the individuals to come to their patrol vessel. Once at their patrol vessel, they inspected the contents of the plastic bag and found several legal blue crabs along with two live stone crabs. The crabs were separated and the individuals were advised that the stone crabs were out of season. After being told to leave the crabs where they were, one of the individuals grabbed one of the stone crabs and threw it in the water. The officers were unable to locate it. One individual was charged with possession of undersized stone crab, possession of whole body stone crabs, and possession of stone crab out of season, and no saltwater fishing license. The other individual was charged with harvesting stone crab out of season, possession of whole body stone crab, possession of undersized stone crab claw, interference with an FWC officer and no saltwater fishing license.

Officers Munkelt and Garrison were on water patrol working resource protection on the bayside of Long Key when they observed an individual snorkeling without a dive flag. Officer Munkelt positioned the patrol vessel so they could keep a constant eye on the individual with binoculars. They officers could clearly see that the individual was swimming next to a buoy commonly used with lobster/stone crab traps. Once at the trap, the individual dove underwater next to the buoy then resurfaced and called for a nearby vessel to come over to him. Once next to the vessel, he placed a white mesh bag on board, boarded the vessel and the vessel began to leave the area. The officers stopped the vessel and identified themselves as FWC Officers. While next to the vessel, they could clearly see one lobster inside the white mesh bag. They tied the vessels together and went back to the buoy. Upon inspection of the buoy, it was tied to two concrete blocks. After reading Miranda, the individual admitted to harvesting the lobster from the concrete blocks and that he did not have a measuring device. He was charged with harvesting lobster out of season, no measuring device, harvesting lobster from artificial habitat and no saltwater fishing license. The operator/owner of the vessel was charged with not having a HIN on his vessel and issued a citation for a boating safety violation.

RESCUES

MONROE COUNTY

Officers Sutter, Wilkins and Boyd responded to a major boating accident in the Vaca Cut area of Marathon late one evening. The vessel crashed up into mangroves as it departed the marked channel. Three vessel occupants were injured, one seriously with multiple fractures. Officer Plussa was the first officer to arrive and assess the scene. He assumed the role of primary investigating officer and completed the investigation with the help of Officers Martino and Baumgartner. Officer Plussa determined that the factors contributing to the cause of the accident were (1) the operator failing to maintain proper lookout and avoid a collision, (2) operating at an unsafe and excessive speed in diminished visibility considering night and backlight scattering, and (3) operator inattention. The operator received citations for two navigation rule violations and warnings for seagrass and mangrove damage. After the vessel was successfully recovered and finally removed from the mangroves, it was determined the vessel was a total loss.

MAJOR WILDLIFE ASSISTANCE

COLLIER COUNTY

Officers Osorio-Borja and Tidwell responded to a call at Clam Pass in reference to a report of a sawfish beaching itself. Upon arrival, the officers observed the sawfish near the shoreline. They were able to grab the tail of the sawfish and push it back into deeper water; however, the sawfish was not able to swim and was being washed onshore by the waves. The officers continued to push the sawfish into the water while they waited for a biologist to respond. After a few hours, the sawfish appeared to be getting worse and was not moving at all. The sawfish appeared to die just before the biologist arrived. Officer Johnson also responded and assisted the officers with transporting the sawfish until the biologist arrived and took possession of it.

In an effort to prevent vessels in neglected or deteriorating condition from reaching a likely and foreseeable state of disrepair, the 2016 Florida Legislature passed a new law prohibiting vessels at risk of becoming derelict from occupying Florida waters. This includes vessels with cabin areas left exposed to the elements, vessels stored aground and left unattended, partially sunken vessels, and other situations involving the vessel approaching a wrecked, junked, abandoned, or substantially dismantled condition. Derelict vessels frequently cause environmental and navigational hazards for the community. Officer Plussa applied this new law on its first effective day in the Boot Key Harbor area of Marathon. He issued fifteen citations to owners and operators of vessels meeting this pre-derelict criteria in an effort to garner compliance from the owners to prevent their vessels' situations from deteriorating further into derelict status.

Officer Plussa responded to Knight's Key Bank where a 24-foot vessel had run over the grass flat and was completely hard aground. After waiting for the next high tide some 7 hours later, salvage operators successfully removed the vessel. Because of the extensive damage caused to the seagrass on the flat by the operator attempting to power off and by the vessel remaining there an entire day as tidal currents washed out around it, the operator was cited for scarring seagrass in the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary Aquatic Preserve.
