Questions to Consider:

❏ During remote instruction, how might school leaders strive for equity in educational opportunities to promote each student's academic success and well being?

❏ How do you strategically promote student agency in remote settings?

❏ How might different technology tools be utilized for the purpose of effective asynchronous and synchronous instruction?

❏ What might you do to ensure asynchronous videos promote high levels of engagement and application of learning?

❏ How might asynchronous instruction be used to connect with students (and parents) on a personal level?

❏ What might you do to equip your teachers to incorporate effective virtual pedagogy for synchronous online discussion so that high levels of engagement, ownership and learning occur?

❏ In your school, is it synchronous or asynchronous instruction that needs enhanced?

❏ What are some examples from KY classrooms of effective synchronous and asynchronous teaching strategies?

If you are interested in exploring one or more of the questions, above, we invite you to join us on March 24th. Large and small group discussions will be utilized.

Once registered, a Zoom link will be sent to the email address you provide.
