Whether it is a desire to push for social change or a response to the increase in incident reports, more and more domestic violence and sexual assault incidents are in the headlines with a gush of social media responses trailing beneath them.

As we issue calls for awareness, we must acknowledge that awareness is a step toward action. It is action that will end violence. Let's vow not to be a powerless bystander.

Next we can extend our awareness to choosing our "heroes" carefully, holding them to high standards & remembering "heroes" just like all of us, have feet of clay. No matter how powerful or privileged, there is no entitlement to do harm.

FEBRUARY & MARCH—AWARENESS OBSERVANCES

February was Teen Dating Violence Awareness Month. The Center for Women & Families is doing great prevention work with teens in our community. Check out Pact in Action

NOTE: Teens are not the only ones affected by dating violence. Kentucky is now the only state that does not offer some type of civil protections to victims of dating violence. If you are any age and in an abusive dating relationship but you have never been married, do not have a child in common or have not lived together: You do not qualify for a Protection Order. How effective are Protection Orders? Click here to see.

March is Sexual Assault Awareness Month in Kentucky and has been proclaimed by Governor Beshear.

Headlines related to sexual assault have been in the news often, particularly in regard to athletics and the military. We are experiencing an increase in voices calling for change, thanks in large part to advocates for change such as attorney Susan Burke and the documentary The Invisible War. Both came to Louisville in 2013.

We can all do something to help end violence. Bystander intervention programs like Men Can Stop Rape and Green Dot work against the "bystander effect" by teaching safe interventions for situations posing a danger to someone.

UPDATE: WOMEN'S SUMMIT—MARCH 7TH

It's "Last Call" for the 2014 Women's Summit!

Your choice for morning breakouts include Barriers and Bridges for those who work with immigrant, refugee and limited English populations. De-Escalation—Working with Families for anyone who works with groups, the public or families and Lessons Learned from the Kentucky Women's Health Registry.

Interested in Micro-Business? There is a morning session by Syvoskia Bray Pope, MicroBusiness Coordinator, Community Services and Revitalization, who was recently featured on WAVE3.

The afternoon, will offer a choice between a workshop on the strategies behind the Seven Secrets of Successful Women, a glimpse of the life of a domestic violence victim by walking In Her Shoes, or experiencing Why Art Is Good For Us.

Mid-day . . . Bring Your Denim
