Louisville Metro Council has asked planning staff to research regulations for Data Centers and provide recommendations on how to update the zoning code. As part of this process, we are seeking community input about how these facilities should be permitted.

What is a Data Center?

Data Centers are buildings that house computer hardware that stores and processes digital information. These facilities are needed for modern digital services and include infrastructure for power, cooling, and security.

What regulations are being reviewed?

The zoning rules will be reviewed to determine where such facilities can be located and how they must be designed, as well as the approval process.
