Or, call 211 if needing help locating available care. Note: If a family has two available caregivers, and only one is in the critical infrastructure workforce, the child is still eligible for disaster relief child care.

To understand potential income eligibility, the chart below shows the monthly income level where a family can enter the Child Development Care (CDC) program. The column marked Entry represents 130% of the federal poverty level (FPL), adjusted by family size, and is the maximum monthly income amount (gross) that allows a family to enter the CDC program. The last column in the chart is the maximum monthly income a family can make to receive the subsidy after the initial eligibility period. Note: Additional eligibility factors are considered, and the application process is the best way to know if essential employees and their families are eligible.
