

Getting vaccinated reduces your risk of getting infected or spreading the virus to someone else. This is important to protect people who cannot get vaccinated yet, like young children.

