Hear. Share. Act. Series Coming to a town near you!

Are you interested in learning how to have your voice heard on the disability system in NC? This event is for you! We are inviting everyone who has a stake in the I/DD worlds to join us at the following hybrid event as we learn how to tell our stories, stock up on local resources for people with disabilities and talk to our policymakers about what's working and what's broken in North Carolina's I/DD service world!

LAND, Family Support Network of High Country, and the North Carolina Council on Developmental Disabilities want to meet and hear from individuals with I/DD, their families, and caregivers to learn about unmet services and support needs.

The event will bring together community partners, agency leaders, and policymakers to hear your story, share resources, and provide education on how you can advocate, educate, and inform key decision-makers on the importance of listening to the voices of those with I/DD lived experience.

This event is hybrid.

In person location is Appalachia State University Reich College of Education Building
151 College Street Boone, NC 28607
