DD/ABD/IHS Waiver Services: Non-Medical Transportation

2

Waiver Definition

Non-Medical transportation services are designed specifically to improve the individual's and the caregiver's ability to access community activities within their own community in response to needs identified through the individual's service agreement.

How Does This Help Me Achieve My Goals?

Non-Medical transportation services help individuals, and their caregivers access the community based on the needs as outlined in their service agreement. This could include:

- Transportation from one place to another.
- Travel training such as supporting the individual and family in learning how to access and use informal and public transportation.
- Transportation services provided by different modalities, including; public and community transportation, taxi services, prepaid transportation cards, mileage reimbursement, volunteer transportation, and non-traditional transportation providers.
- Prepaid transportation vouchers and cards.
- Parking and toll fees.

Non-Medical Transportation Scenario

Background

Emily is a 22-year-old woman with a developmental disability who lives with her parents. Emily enjoys participating in various community activities such as visiting the local library and volunteering at the animal shelter. Emily does not currently have a driver's license, so she is without transportation during the day.

Accessing and Using the Service

Emily learns about Non-Medical Transportation and work with her service coordinator to add this service to her service agreement. Emily's service agreement outlines the transportation schedule, preferred routes, and any necessary support during transit. Emily accesses local public transportation to get to her community activities.

Outcome of the Service

After accessing Non-Medical Transportation, Emily gains a sense of independence as she now has transportation to attend her favorite activities. This boosts her confidence and social skills. Reliable transportation allows Emily to participate in more community activities, leading to a more fulfilling and active lifestyle. She enjoys her visits to the library and volunteering, which contribute to her overall well-being.
