Exhibitions

Now - May 10, Dreaming of Utopia: Roosevelt, New Jersey, Morven Museum. The first of its kind, this show examines the history of Roosevelt, from its early days as an antidote to the Great Depression to a twenty-first century arts community. For more information visit morven.org.

On View - June 28, Preserving the Pinelands: Albert Horner's Portraits of a National

Treasure, New Jersey State Museum, 205 West State Street St, Trenton. The exhibit will feature images which capture the quiet beauty and intimate landscapes of New Jersey's Pinelands National Reserve by photographer Albert Horner, and artifacts from the NJ State Museum's collections which tell just some of the stories of the land, animals, people and industries that make the Reserve a state and national treasure. The 40th anniversary of the Pinelands Preservation Act, considered by former Governor Brendan Byrne to be the most important accomplishment of his administration, and the issue most central to his legacy as governor. For more information visit nj.us/state/museum. (W.V)

Now - February 16, The Eternal Feast: Banqueting in Chinese Art from 10th to the 14th Century, Princeton University Art Museum. The exhibition brings to life the art of the feast during three transformative Chinese dynasties, the Song, Liao, and Yuan, which together enjoyed a thriving economy, cultural flourishing, and the intermingling of foreign and native traditions. Focusing on a rare group of surviving paintings from the period—along with ceramic, lacquer, metal, and stone objects as well as textiles—the exhibition reveals feasts to be singularly positioned to illuminate one of the most enduring and significant facets of the Chinese tradition: the continuum between life and the afterlife. The exhibition features fifty objects arranged in sections that focus on ladies banqueting in the past, gentlemen feasting in the present, and dining in the afterlife. Several other aspects of elite feasting—including costume, cuisine, music, and dance, as well as burial customs, architecture and gardens, artistic patronage, and painterly practice—are also explored, offering a window into life, death, and art during a time period whose cultural influence extends in China to the present day. Opportunities of trash on earth and how artists can have a positive impact on the environment through the partnership of art and recycling. The opening reception of the show is Sunday, January 12, from 4 to 6 pm.

Artist Opportunities

• Playfest 2020

The Lawrence Headquarters Branch of the Mercer County Library System will be hosting their annual PlayFest on Saturday, April 25, 2020. For the twelfth consecutive year, local directors will stage script-in-hand performances of one-act plays. This annual event is designed to showcase local original theater. Plays should be ten minutes in length, with a maximum of five actors. Playwrights should be of high school age or older and reside or work in the Delaware Valley. Submissions are limited to a maximum of two per playwright. Playwrights, amateur or professional, should submit their plays by Friday, January 10, 2020. Scripts can be emailed as a Word document attachment to akerr@mcl.org or may be brought to the Lawrence Headquarters Branch Library reference desk. Please include two title pages: one with the play title only and the other with play title and name, address, phone, and email address of the playwright. The playwright's name should not appear in the script. For additional information please call Ann Kerr, 609-883-8292.

Vernita Nemec, (AKA Vernita N'Cognita), juror of the Doom and Bloom show, is a visual/performance artist/curator who has exhibited her art around the world. N'Cognita is currently the director of Viridian Artists art gallery in Chelsea, New York City. She has curated and organized exhibitions of art from recycled materials throughout the United States, including "Art from Detritus: Recycling with Imagination," for which she received a Kauffman Foundation Fellowship and a grant from the Puffin Foundation. Her artwork ranges across a variety of disciplines, including installations, collages, and tangible art objects.

The Doom and Bloom show includes N'Cognita's "Endless Junkmail Scroll" installation. In a description of N'Cognita's Endless Junkmail Scroll, Times Observer Writer Stacey Gross explains, "The dynamic nature of the piece allows it to morph and adapt to any space in which it is shown, allowing Nemec to "fill the air with detritus transformed" and creating a physical space out of art itself...The installation confronts multiple social and environmental issues inherent in twenty-first century life... Human beings' ability to end life as we know it by the process of production and consumption, is the ultimate thesis of the piece."

Visitors will have the opportunity to view and purchase artworks at the Doom and Bloom exhibition at West Windsor Arts Center, 952 Alexander Rd, Princeton Junction, NJ 08550. For more information, call 609-716-1931 or write info@westwindsorarts.org.
