About this webinar

This workshop will be a conversation about how faith communities can be places for care, connection, and prevention when gambling begins to cause harm. Problem gambling often affects individuals and families quietly, and faith leaders and congregations are often among the first to notice when someone is struggling. This webinar highlights practical, people-centered ways faith communities can walk alongside individuals and families, offer nonjudgement support, and connect them to problem gambling resources when needed, reinforcing that prevention starts with relationships and community care.

FAITH-BASED 2026

About this webinar

This presentation explores the cultural, historical, and systemic barriers that impact mental health prevention in the Black community and highlights strategies to rebuild trust, increase access, and promote early intervention. Through education, community engagement, and culturally responsive practices, we outline how to create pathways to healing, resilience, and long-term wellbeing.
