

Ryan Zaloudek is the President & CEO of the Greater Enid Chamber of Commerce, where she leads efforts to strengthen the local business climate and enhance quality of life across Enid and Northwest Oklahoma. With a background in workforce development and business and industry training, Ryan has spent her career working alongside employers in manufacturing, government, healthcare, retail, non-profit, and education to support talent development and organizational growth.

Prior to joining the Chamber, Ryan served in workforce and economic development roles at Autry Technology Center, where she partnered with regional employers to design training solutions, support employee development, and address evolving workforce needs. Her work has consistently focused on building connections between business, education, and community partners to create sustainable, long-term impact. She has also worked closely with military spouses and active duty programs, helping them navigate employment opportunities, build skills, and establish a local connection to Enid for the duration of their Vance Air Force Base assignment.

Ryan is known for her practical, relationship-driven leadership style and her commitment to stewardship, collaboration, and community alignment. In her role at the Chamber, she is focused on modernizing programs, strengthening member value, and positioning Enid for continued growth by supporting both established businesses and emerging opportunities.

Ryan married her best friend, Mitchell, in 2013. Together, they have two children and two French Bulldogs who are convinced they are part of the family. She is deeply committed to her community and passionate about ensuring Enid remains a strong place to live, work, and do business.
