Success for Sohail at the British Muslim Awards 2022

Congratulations to Chief Medical Officer, Dr Sohail Munshi (pictured right) who was highly commended at the 9th British Muslim Awards held on Thursday 24 February.

For those of you who're not familiar, the awards showcase the strength of the British Muslim community, their impact on our culture and achievements from over the last year.

Categories include Muslims in the Community, Young Achiever of the Year and Spirit of Britain.

The awards aim to recognise a wide range of achievements from inspirational individuals to those who positively impact business, charity, sport, arts, culture, religious advocacy, education, and medicine.

This year, there were 300 finalists who were then divided into more than 30 categories, with around 10 in each one.

We caught up with Sohail and he said:

“I’d been nominated within the Dr Abbas services to medicine category for my work on connecting the vaccine programmes to underserved communities and in particular for leading a programme called Making Every Contact Count. This looked to build on community engagement work at vaccine centres and wider to offer targeted public health signposting and or interventions.

On the night of the awards ceremony, which was held at the British Muslim, Heritage Centre in Manchester I was surprised but delighted to hear my name called out. I’m now feeling extremely blessed and I’d like to thank everyone who’s been a support to me.”

Again, from us all here at Manchester LCO Sohail - congratulations! We’re extremely proud of you.
