

Trauma Responsive Childcare

What is it?

Free Webinar

The Belay Foundation is a charity that supports children who have been through the care system and are now living with permanent families such as adoptive families, special guardian families and kinship care families. All the children we support have experienced trauma such as abuse, neglect, separation and loss.

One of the services we offer families is finding trauma-responsive childcare. For our children, although they are now physically safe, the legacy of their early experiences continues. To those of us around them, their behaviours can be confusing and difficult to understand and our children can continue to live with very high levels of fear that impact every area of their lives.

Free online webinar

This hour-long information session is a brief introduction to the subject of responding to our children in ways that helps them feel safe. We will touch on:

- how early trauma impacts our children and why the fear doesn't just go away
- how fear disguises itself as other emotions and behaviours
- ideas of how to help a child feel safe

This is suitable for anyone with children around them, professionally or personally, who they know or suspect have experienced early trauma.
