Understanding Myself Training - Online via Teams - 10.00-11.00pm

The Understanding Myself programme has been developed by Daisy Chain as part of the Autism in Schools Project which is a national initiative. It has been piloted and adapted in co-production with neurodiverse young people and is underpinned by numerous psychological theories and practices.

Understanding Myself is a 6-week programme (1 hour per week) designed to help the young people to understand and be able to communicate their needs.

The aim of the intervention is to increase self-awareness; help others understand the needs of the young people and their unique experiences of the world; improve self-esteem and raise confidence.

Once trained you are provided with a pack that will contain all the activities, resources, and information you need to deliver the sessions.

- 6 November 2024

To book a place please email Neurodiversity0-19Enquiries@portsmouthcc.gov.uk confirming which session you would like to book onto.
