AT PORTSMOUTH MUSEUM AND ART GALLERY

Hello,

I am delighted to share with you the programme of exhibitions and events for this season at Portsmouth Museums.

The museum service includes The D-Day Story, Portsmouth Museum and Art Gallery, Portsmouth Natural History Museum – Cumberland House, Southsea Castle, Eastney Engine Houses and Charles Dickens Birthplace.

Each one is unique, captivating and fascinating and offers visitors something different. Be it standing in the place where King Henry VIII saw the Mary Rose sink, to exploring artwork that takes you to a place of serenity, or maybe marvelling over Eastney's engineering, there is something for everyone.

This season we have some exciting exhibitions taking place, starting with The Quietness of Feeling at Portsmouth Museum and Art Gallery's newly refurbished art galleries. It will feature works by artist Benjamin Haughton and The Arborealists.

At Cumberland House in December we are showcasing the collection of Henry Leopold Foster Guermonprez, who amassed around 119,000 specimens of plants, animals, fossils and minerals.

To end the season, Portsmouth Museum and Art Gallery will be hosting a British Museum spotlight loan exhibition, entitled: Ancient Sudan: enduring heritage.

Plus, there are several events taking place across all the museums.

The Quietness of Feeling

October 2024–August 2025

An Exploration of Trees through the Art of Benjamin Haughton and The Arborealists

FREE

Benjamin Haughton was a British landscape painter who studied under Sir Hubert von Herkomer.

The son of a farmer, he was born in Cheshire in 1865. He had no art training until he attended Bushey Art School in Hertfordshire at the age of 23.

Over his career he lived in Tuscany, Kent and the West Country and was exhibited regularly at the Royal Academy and Royal Society of British Artists, becoming a member of the latter.

Haughton found inspiration from the beauty of trees and in the solitude of the countryside and woodlands. His preoccupation with the alchemy of light influenced his rich use of colour, tone and scope of subject matter, from the interior twilight of the pine woods to views into valleys.

In 1973 Haughton's family donated more than 300 paintings to the museum. 2024 marks the centenary of his death and to commemorate, Portsmouth Museum and Art Gallery present an exhibition exploring his love of trees.

The free exhibition will showcase over 80 of Haughton's paintings and include a peek into some of his sketchbooks.

The exhibition will also feature work by over 30 members of The Arborealists. The group was formed in 2013 by curator and artist Tim Craven, after the success of Under the Green Wood: Picturing the British tree, an exhibition he co-curated.

The group is comprised of artists that give trees, forests and woods a special value in their work.

Guermonprez's Legacy

December 2024–December 2025

FREE

Guermonprez's Legacy will look at how relevant HLF Guermonprez's collection is 100 years after his death and how the collection is being used by researchers and biologists today.

Henry Leopold Foster Guermonprez was a West Sussex Naturalist born in 1858. He had a passion for natural history and collected thousands of specimens from his hometown of Bognor Regis over a period of 40 years.

The collection is now held in trust by Portsmouth Museums and features around 100,000 specimens mainly from West Sussex. His collections include insects, plants, molluscs, marine invertebrates, taxidermy, birds' nests and fossils.

Guermonprez was interested in all aspects of natural history and this is reflected in the collections held at Portsmouth.

The D-Day Story is the only UK museum dedicated to the momentous events of 6 June 1944.

It tells the story in three distinct parts. First you get to go onboard LCT 7074, the last surviving Landing Craft Tank that took part in the D-Day landings, then explore the personal stories behind the objects in the museum's collection and finally marvel at the impressive Overlord Embroidery.

2024 marks 50 years since the final panel of the Overlord Embroidery was completed. The 83-metre embroidery tells the story of D-Day and the Battle of Normandy in 34 hand-stitched panels. In 1968 Frederick Anthony Hamilton Wills, the 2nd Lord Dulverton commissioned artist Sandra Lawrence to design the embroidery and 20 skilled embroiderers from the prestigious Royal School of Needlework were called upon to stitch it. Check the website to see the events to commemorate the 50th anniversary.

Did you know that most of our events are free to annual pass holders?

Including the majority of the talks by curator Andrew Whitmarsh. If you are a family with a pass you can take part in the craft activities that take place during the school holidays, be it a stitch session with the prestigious Royal School of Needlework or making your own LCT landing craft tank to take home.

The annual pass also means you can visit the museum as often as you like.

An adult annual pass is £22.90, so if you visited six times in the year it works out at £3.81 a visit.

The family ticket (up to two adults and three children) is £51.50, if you visited just once every school break it works out at £7.35 a visit. Just ask to upgrade your ticket when you next visit the museum.

On 7 February 1812
Charles Dickens
was born in a house in Old Commercial Road, Portsmouth.

The eldest son of John and Elizabeth Dickens, he was christened Charles John Huffam Dickens in the nearby St Mary's Church.

You can walk around the first home of Charles Dickens, which contains some of his prized personal possessions, and discover the room in which he was born in. Entry is free for Portsmouth residents.

The Dickens family lived in the home from 1809 for three years, before moving to 16 Hawke Street, which was destroyed by bombing in 1941.

Though he moved to London at a young age, and later spent his years in Kent, Dickens returned to his place of birth on several occasions. Among the most notable was in 1838, when he was writing and researching the semi-autobiographical novel, Nicholas Nickleby. In the story, Vincent Crummles' run-down theatre company visits the old Theatre Royal, which stood on High Street from around 1750 to 1856.

In 1858, Dickens (by now a huge celebrity whose public appearances drew huge crowds) gave one of his famous readings. He returned once more to give another reading in 1866 – and during his visit he looked for, and indeed found, Mile End Terrace – the road name of his family home back then.

Events at Charles Dickens' Birthplace

Writing workshop with author Ali Sparkes

Tuesday 29, Wednesday 30 and
Thursday 31 October, 6pm–8pm

Cost: £25

Author Ali Sparkes will host three Halloween week workshops inspired by Charles Dickens' horror mystery story The Signalman. Conjuring up the spirit of spooky writing in Dickens' own Portsmouth birthplace, Ali will share the tricks and techniques that the UK's most revered author employed in this short and chilling Dickens novella - and the real-life disaster which may have prompted it.

The Signalman, first published in 1866, follows the tale of a traveller in conversation with a signalman on a bleak, dark stretch of railway, against the backdrop of terrifying portents of doom.

Ali Sparkes is the author of more than 66 books for children, young adults and adults, and the winner of two Blue Peter Children's Book awards.

This writers' workshop is for any adult writer (and accompanied teens over 14) who would enjoy the frisson of writing something short, sweet and ghostly for Halloween. Places are limited, so please book quickly.

To book phone 023 9283 4779.

Christmas at Charles Dickens' Birthplace

Thursday 5, Saturday 14, Sunday 15,
Thursday 19, Saturday 21, Sunday
22 and Sunday 29 December.

Immerse yourself in a Dickensian Christmas at the birthplace of one of the England's literary greats.

On select dates visitors will be able to enjoy readings of the classic Christmas tale: A Christmas Carol.

Entry to the museum is free for Portsmouth residents.

King Henry VIII ordered that Southsea Castle be built in 1544 and for over 400 years, it was an active military base, holding a key position defending the approaches to Portsmouth Harbour. Through wars, fires, and ruin, it still stands to this day.

The castle receives thousands of visitors every year who come to explore it and to enjoy the panoramic views to the Isle of Wight and of the Solent from its ramparts.

The keep now contains displays about the castle's history, as well as some key artefacts that have played a role, including some items found in the Tudor well. Part of the exterior wall of the keep is the original Tudor stonework but there have been many repairs and alterations made over the centuries.

Southsea Castle can also be used for hire as a wedding venue as well as for private and public functions.

It is open as a historical attraction, free of charge, Tuesdays to Sundays between April and October each year. Visitors can also enjoy a bite to eat in The Courtyard (open all year).

EASTNEY ENGINE HOUSES

Visit the impressive engine houses at Eastney which showcase engineering through the ages.

Get up close to some impressive machines – some of which date back to 1887.

The group of engine houses include the 1865 pump house and boiler house, the 1887 boiler house, pump house and chimney, and the 1904 gas engine house.

The engine houses were built because Portsmouth desperately needed a proper sewage disposal system due to population expansion.

As the city is built on a low-lying island it has poor natural drainage. This resulted in waste and sewage frequently polluting the water supply – which resulted in many deaths from cholera and other diseases.

When they were retired from normal use, the beam engines were kept in operating condition as a backup until 1954. Maintenance of the engines and pumps was discontinued after 1954. Following extensive restoration, the Beam Engine House was opened as an industrial museum in 1972.

The Beam Engine House is an impressive Victorian building designed by Sir Frederick Bramwell and finished in 1887. It houses a pair of classic Boulton and Watt beam engines and pumps which have been restored to their original 1887 condition.

To the west of the Beam Engine House is the Gas Engine House. The gas engines were installed in 1904 in response to residential and industrial expansion across Portsea Island.

Until 1954 the Gas Engine House operated alongside the Beam Engine House, and was converted to run on North Sea gas in 1971. Today the building is a part of the Eastney Engine Houses experience.

Both Engine Houses are open on the last Sunday of every month (except August and December), with the Beam Engine House open from 10am to 3pm and the Gas Engine House from 10am to 12.30pm.

Ancient Sudan: enduring heritage

Saturday 1 February 2025–Saturday 19 April 2025

FREE

Supported by the Dorset Foundation

Explore the Kushite Kingdom, a fascinating civilisation that flourished in Sudan nearly 3,000 years ago.

Positioned at a crossroads between Central Africa and the Mediterranean, Ancient Sudan was a nexus for people, cultures and ideas.

The Kingdom of Kush (8th century BC – 4th century AD) was at its height one of the largest empires in the ancient world, ruling from the Blue Nile to the Levant, with its kings ruling Egypt as pharaohs.

This touring exhibition will examine this ancient culture's skilled craftsmanship, distinct religious beliefs, and the important role of women, as well as exploring the rich culture of modern Sudan. Highlights include beautiful examples of ceramics, a carved stone offering table and a striking bronze depiction of a goddess that will inspire wonder.

Sadly, this cultural legacy now faces significant threats due to an ongoing civil war that has displaced millions of people.

While highlighting the efforts of Sudanese people to protect their heritage, the exhibition will introduce audiences to a deep, rich culture that is not defined solely by present conflict.
