

10 things to do in lockdown half-term

Stuck for things to do from home this half-term? We've got you covered! Check out our suggestions to help make your lockdown half-term time fun and interesting.

Fancy home-grown tomatoes or strawberries for the summer? Get those green fingers gardening – it's a lovely time to grow things in the house and to get your garden ready for spring.

It's Pancake Day on 16 February, so put your aprons on and have a pancake flipping competition. Pick your family's favourite toppings - whether it's lemon and sugar, chocolate or fruit.

Don't forget some exercise. Build an assault course in your garden or maybe in your home. Who can complete it in the fastest time? Don't forget to add penalties.

Treasure hunts with clues not only keep our brain active, but they can also get us outside in the garden for some fresh air, allowing some time away from our screens.

Ever wanted to find out more about dinosaurs, the Queen, the Pyramids, space or art? Lots of museums and galleries are offering virtual tours and visits.

Get creative. With more people out walking for their daily exercise, why not brighten their day and display art in your windows. Check out The Great Art Exhibition for inspiration.

17 February is Random Acts of Kindness Day. Make a small gift for those you live with, or write down and share three things you appreciate about them. Is there someone living near you on their own? Would a letter or call cheer them up?

Eating out is something we all miss. So why not dust off your cooking skills and have a take away night with homemade pizzas, burgers or fish and chips.

On those rainy days all we want to do is curl up, get cosy and have a movie day! Grab your popcorn, snacks, blankets and turn the lights out. Enjoy a movie marathon.

Challenge yourselves to do something as a family - whether it's a step goal, or reading a set number of books during the week. Make sure there's a reward if you achieve it!
