

Energy Project Finance Moving into Late 2020 and 2021

How the U.S. Government is Helping International Project Finance Projects in the Energy Sector

Join the U.S. Commercial Service for a series of webinars supporting the U.S. energy industry. For the first in the series, hear from two critical institutions involved in international finance for the industry: Inter-American Development Bank \(IDB\), which focuses on project finance in Latin America, which provides trade financing solutions.

During the recent events in the first half of 2020 and resulting economic downturn, and with the price of oil dropping dramatically, the oil and gas industry experienced ‘a one-two punch.’ International upstream, midstream and downstream projects have all suffered. The IDB have stepped-up their game to fund key infrastructure projects in the Latin America and the Caribbean. As a multilateral development bank, the IDB provides financing and technical assistance for projects in its 26 countries of operation in Latin America and the Caribbean.

In this webinar, the U.S. Commercial Liaison to the IDB will provide an overview of the IDB, IDB sovereign projects, and how to find bank opportunities. The webinar will also include participation from IDB Invest, the IDB’s private sector financing division. An Investment Officer from the energy team will present the various financing instruments that IDB Invest offers for projects in Latin America. In the end, U.S. companies of all sizes will benefit from learning about IDB public sector projects in the energy sector, how to identify these opportunities, as well as IDB financing for private firms.
