

Chantilly High School journalism students were recognized for their tenth consecutive First Amendment Press Freedom Award at the April 16 meeting of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors. Broadcast executive producer Luke Barlow accepted the award, speaking briefly on the importance of students developing stories on topics of interest free from censorship. He also thanked Chantilly High School administration for their support. Other media leaders include broadcast executive producer Lauren Sousa, news media editors-in-chief Anjali Ashok and Gaby Gutierrez, news media online managing editor Haley Oeur, yearbook editors-in chief Alexis Huff and Patricia Ramos Quintanilla, and literary magazine editor-in-chief Eunice Lee. Media advisers Kris Brown and Luc Nguyen also attended. Congratulations to all on a well-deserved recognition.