

WAYS A PARENT CAN HELP WITH READING IN MIDDLE SCHOOL

-  Encourage independent reading and provide access to a variety of books, including graphic novels and non-fiction.
-  Talk to your child about the books they are reading and ask questions to encourage critical thinking skills.
-  Encourage your child to join a book club or participate in other reading-based activities outside of school.
-  Provide a quiet and conducive reading environment at home.
-  Help your child develop study skills by assisting with reading and summarizing assigned texts.
-  Encourage note-taking and outlining to improve comprehension and recall.
-  Provide support and guidance as your child transitions to more complex and challenging reading materials.

Your encouragement and involvement can help your child become a confident and capable reader!
