

Remembering The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Sunday, January 19, 2025

Morning Worship, 10 a.m.

Our annual MLK Day service will feature readings of Dr. King's writings and will be led by members of our antiracism ministry as readers and liturgists. We will also welcome back Suzette Reynolds, who is the interfaith coordinator for Fairfax County.

Letter Writing and Lunch, 11:30 a.m.

Join us for a letter writing campaign for William—an incarcerated friend of Little River and featured inmate in Sylvia Ryerson's documentary Calls from Home—who has been denied parole again (having served more than 27 years). A brown bag lunch follows for those staying for Microaggression & How to Intervene at 1 p.m.

Microaggression & How to Intervene, 1 p.m.

Hear Meg Tuccillo discuss microaggressions, common-place verbal and behavioral indignities, whether intentional or not. Microaggressions can result in communicating hostile, derogatory, or negative verbal slights and insults. Like it or not, they happen often, and sometimes out of our own mouths! Breakout groups follow the presentation. Meg is the Co-Vice President for Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion at the American Association of University Women of Virginia. Live stream: bit.ly/LR-Microaggressions

Interfaith Service and Moral Mass Meeting, 7 p.m.

This is a time for people of faith, conscience, and good will to gather in worship, lifting a collective voice to be Prophetic, Pastoral, Prayerful, and in Protest. United, we will bear witness to this moment and affirm our unwavering commitment to justice, equity, and the dignity of all people. In a time when our nation longs for justice, healing and unity, "For Such a Time as This" aims to center love and justice while challenging the divisive narratives that too often misrepresent the role of faith in public life. Learn more & join online: www.ucc.org/interfaith-service-and-moral-mass-meeting.
