for free in-person Health Ambassador Trainings

The Health Quality Innovation Network (HQIN) and Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health are offering free regional in-person Health Ambassador Trainings for nursing home staff.

This training uses the Be REAL (Relate, Explore, Assist, Leave the door open) framework, which focuses on building trust by forming relationships, targeting resources responsive to a facility's population and always keeping the door open for interactions to improve health outcomes.

Two people may register per facility. Recommended participants include:

Nurses

Social Services

Residents

Infection Prevention
Nurses

Dietary

Family Members

Nursing Assistants

Environmental Services

Volunteers

These sessions will be interactive and include group discussion, small-group activities, games, as well as an opportunity to practice what has been learned. Register today:

June 18
Hampton

June 19
