

Long-Term Care Session

The Northwest Healthcare Response Network (NWHRN), along with the long-term care advisory group, are considering hosting quarterly outreach sessions with Long Term Care (LTC) providers to establish awareness for preparing resilient health care systems that saves lives and serve the community during emergencies. The vision in these outreach sessions is to support information sharing and discussions regarding emergency preparedness, response, and planning. The purpose of these conversations are to connect LTC facilities and supporting partner agencies across the state with the goal of building resilient system capabilities together.

The Network is holding an introductory session on July 24th! This session will be the first opportunity to learn from providers what information, resources, and tools are needed to build resilient systems and be prepared for emergencies or disasters. We are looking forward to hearing from LTC subject matter experts about real-world experiences and needs. We want to gather ideas from providers on topics and tools for the upcoming Fall and Winter 2024 sessions, ideas for speakers to learn from about emergency preparedness, and support interactive learnings sessions with participants. The NWHRN will record these sessions to allow for shared learnings and suggests prioritizing attendance as able.

Date: Wednesday, July 24th

Time: 10am to noon
