Become a Direct Support Professional

What is a Direct Support Professional?

Direct Support Professionals offer assistance to individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities in their own home and community.

As a DSP, your job includes:

- independent living skills instruction.
- individual assistance.
- planning and scheduling.
- promoting personal power, individual choice, diversity and inclusion.

Work that matters

Supporting people with intellectual and developmental disabilities to live as equal and valued members of their community makes a lasting impact.

As a DSP you have the chance to change the lives of people you support and the community you live in.

Support people with intellectual and developmental disabilities to live, work and thrive at home – and in their community.

You get so much from the people you're working with, to grow and become a better human being, not just a better employee.

— Cody L.
Kokua Services

More than a job – it's a career

Working as a Direct Support Professional offers opportunities for career advancement to supervisory and management positions in Supported Living agencies.

Part-time and full-time positions are available.

Supported Living agencies offer training and professional support to create a career path that takes you where you want to go.

Become a Professional Provider

Partnering with Developmental Disabilities Administration will give you the opportunity to build meaningful relationships and improve the lives of others by supporting individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities in their home and in the community.

Whether you want to work for a private agency, for DDA, or be an independent contractor the choice is yours!

Become a provider today and experience a dynamic rewarding career with professional development opportunities, flexible schedules, and a competitive rate of pay. No prior experience needed. Training will be provided to you.

Apply today to become a Direct Support Professional, Companion Home Provider or Alternative Living provider.

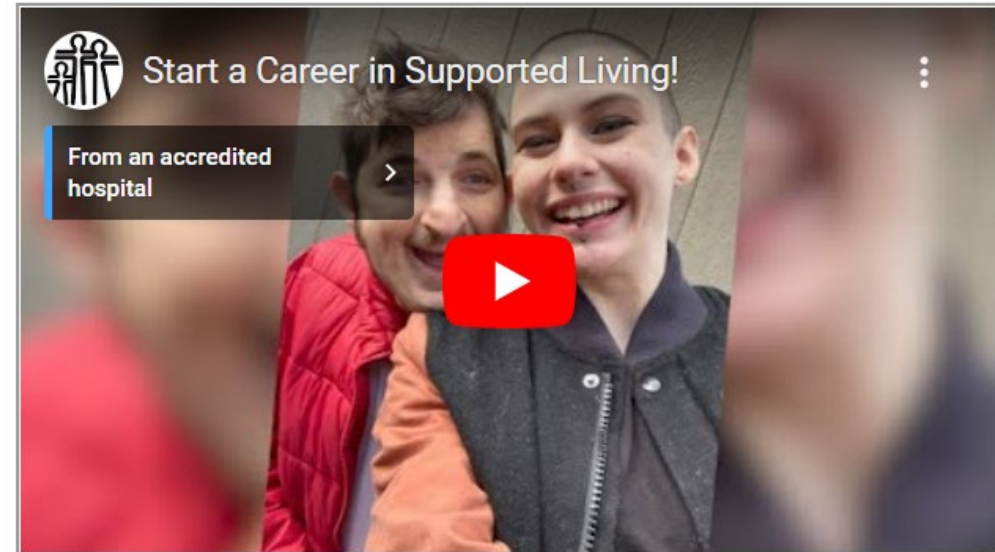

Types of Professions

As a Direct Support Professional, you will be working as an employee for an agency that provides 24-hour instruction and support services in supported living or group homes. You can work for a private agency or for a state operated agency (SOLA).

As a Companion Home Provider, you will contract with DDA to support one individual who lives in the home with you.

As an Alternative Living Provider, you will be a contracted provider for DDA. You can set your own schedule and work with one or more individual in the home and in the community.

Direct Support Professionals

Direct Support Professionals work for a community provider that offers 24-hour instruction and support services to people with disabilities. Individuals who receive services live in their own homes with supported living, or in a group home to promote their personal power, choice, and full access to the greater community. DSPs work in the individual's home and help the individual maintain skills or learn new skills at home and in the community.
