Criminal Law

The U.S. District Court for the Western District of Washington in collaboration with the Seattle University School of Law is offering teachers grade 5-12 a unique opportunity to learn about the U.S. Constitution, federal judiciary, and issues of civil rights, federal-state courts, and federal criminal law. The institute is highly interactive. For the first time, due to Covid, it will be offered virtually.

This year the program features Mary Beth Tinker, plaintiff in Tinker v. Des Moines School District, 1969, in which the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that public school students do not shed their free speech rights at the school house door. There will be a new section on qualified immunity for police officers, as well as presentations on the U.S. Supreme Court and Judicial Review.

Judges who hear the cases you read about in the news will be faculty along with long-term law-related education expert Margaret Fisher to help translate this content into lessons immediately usable in the classroom.

Teachers from prior years had this to say:

The courtroom experiences and presentations by the judges and other speakers were by far the most valuable part of the Institute. The academic resources and content will definitely be assets in my classroom, but the experience of being in court and hearing from the people who work in the judicial system gave me a level of understanding that all my years of academic study had failed to do. It also showed me just how valuable those same experiences are for my students, which will have a significant impact on how I teach the judicial system going forward.

Hard to say because it was all really GREAT! Loved hearing from all of the presenters. Search warrant talk was great. Really, loved all. Seeing and hearing from those at each process and level was great. Loved having M.B. Tinker as a guest!! Wow - cool to have someone we have read about who told us about her actual experiences and how she is using her passion for kids at this time.
