

The Small Bites School Safety Training Series

Hosted by the Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction Safety Center

The Small Bites Training Series offers short, focused learning opportunities designed to support school staff, safety teams, and community partners. Each session provides practical strategies, key concepts, and actionable tools that can be immediately applied in school settings.

These trainings are ideal for busy educators looking to strengthen prevention efforts, improve student support, and build safer, more connected school communities—without a large time commitment.

Each session is:

- Brief and accessible (designed for quick learning)
- Focused on real-world application
- Aligned with school safety, prevention, and student support efforts
- Available individually—participate in what's most relevant to your role

These training offerings are free and offered statewide for district leaders, building leaders, security staff, safety leads, counselors, and social workers.
