

Building Safer Schools Together Series

Hosted by the Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction Safety Center

Join OSPI and subject-matter expert Dr. Melissa A. Reeves to our Building Safer Schools Together Series. This series brings together advanced strategies to strengthen prevention, intervention, and long-term recovery efforts in K–12 settings.

Across three focused sessions, participants will deepen their skills in crisis response, integrate mental health into school safety planning, and enhance behavioral threat assessment practices with an emphasis on case management and reintegration. Each session is designed as a standalone training, allowing participants to attend one, two, or all three based on their role and interests.

Each session is:

- Brief and accessible (designed for quick learning)
- Focused on real-world application
- Aligned with school safety, prevention, and student support efforts
- Available individually—participate in what's most relevant to your role

These training offerings are free and offered statewide for district leaders, building leaders, security staff, safety leads, counselors, and social workers.
