Darrell A. Campbell, Jr., MD, is the Director of the Michigan Surgical Quality Collaborative, and Professor Emeritus, Department of Surgery, University of Michigan Medical School. He received his undergraduate degree from Michigan State University, and graduated from George Washington University School of Medicine in 1972. Dr. Campbell received his General Surgery training at the University of Michigan and spent two years as an investigator in the National Cancer Institute, National Institutes of Health. He joined the University of Michigan Surgery faculty heading the Section of Transplantation. He led the Section of General Surgery until 1997, and served as the Chief of Staff for the University of Michigan Health System from 2002-2010. He became the inaugural Chief Medical Officer at the University of Michigan Health System from 2010-2014.

Dr. Campbell is widely recognized for his contribution in creating the Michigan Quality Collaborative, a novel quality initiative that successfully linked hospitals, providers and payers to collect and share data in programs for quality improvement. He was awarded the Michigan Hospital Association’s Keystone “Patient Safety and Quality Leadership Award” in 2005; and he was the recipient of the John M. Eisenberg Award for Patient Safety and Quality, awarded by the Agency for Health Care Research and Quality and the Joint Commission, in 2007. In 2013, Dr. Campbell was named by Becker’s Hospital Review as one of the “50 Experts Leading the Field of Patient Safety,” and in 2014 was awarded the Impact Accelerator Award at the University of Michigan Institute for Healthcare Policy and Innovation for his sustained contributions to health policy and practice.
